HARVESTAIRE IS ON THE MOVE

Balcatta, WA

Release Date: For Immediate Release, 30 August 2022

WA-owned Ag parts manufacturer Harvestaire has expanded its factory workshop, warehouse, and office space as it moves premises around the corner to increase production of its range of more than 3000+ aftermarket harvesting parts.

Company general manager Dirk Vorster says the planned expansion to their new 3600m² premises in Booth Place Balcatta, will allow the company to manufacture header parts and lamb cradles on a 365-day basis, adding that the existing facilities were unable to accommodate the larger stock holding of imported & locally fabricated parts.

"Our premises have served us well since the early 80s, but with the additional space, we will have the warehousing capacity to manufacture and stock larger quantities than before. This will significantly reduce manufacturing lead times in harvest and keep growers moving," he says.

"Harvestaire has built a reputation over the last 4 decades for not just manufacturing those hard to come by parts but more often than not improving on the original design and ensuring our parts will last in tough Aussie conditions. Same goes for our imported range, each product is carefully selected, not just based on quality but we always ask ourselves will this product deliver an on-farm improvement."

"Over the years, we have enhanced and added products to our range, including the Crary Wind System, Ihle Fabrication auger liners, Kondex KX7 Concaves, and as with our own Harvestaire manufactured product range we are committed to ensuring our products meet the needs of our farmers and the tough Australian crop conditions.

"We aim to support farmers and our dealers through harvest with the reliability and high-quality of our Harvestaire parts. When a farmer chooses a Harvestaire part, they can be confident that it will outperform any other aftermarket part - that's what we stand for," he says.

Harvestaire is open Mon-Fri 7.00am - 5.30pm, Saturday 7.30am - 12.00pm during the harvest season. The new Harvestaire premises address is 1 Booth Place Balcatta, WA 6021.
